FILM: ALFIE

Friday 3rd April at 2.30 and 7.30pm

For Alfie, the only real life is sex life; only then can he kid himself he is living. Sex is not used as the working-class boy's way to 'the top'. Executive status has no appeal for Alfie. Nor has class mobility. He is quite content to stay where he is, as long as the 'birds' are in 'beautiful condition', as he assures us they are in one of the candid, over-the-shoulder asides to the camera which the film carries over from "Tom Jones". The film shows how much of the 'swinging 60's' quality of London life was a male creation, and through the dominance of the fashion photographers, a male prerogative.

DAVE SPIKEY

Saturday 11th April at 7.30pm

Punchlines generally derive their humour from being unexpected - "Punch" indicating that the "Line" should always come as a surprise or shock. The major school of thought suggests that very few Punchlines are inherently funny out of context. There is another school of thought (Actually Dave's school of thought) that the opposite can be true. In this new show he will present evidence to support this. He quotes : - "Nice tits , where do you want your blinds?" / "It's not my dog" / That's my Thermos flask !". Then of course there's Nuns. Nuns in baths, Nuns on bikes and Prince Charles wearing a Fox hat. Dave will argue that you don't always need a Punchline for a joke to be hilarious and suggests that if you doubt him, you should ask the bloke with the big orange head. ADULTS ONLY.

They can no longer enjoy the sea and the sun as they used to, and the spreading fear is affecting the numbers of tourists that are normally attracted to this island.
